The Recreational Fund.
From the Shanghai Record.
Some men have got a fund of wit, and some of information; others have money in the Pounds, which is cause of congratulation. There's a fund for relieving foreigners in a friend; but the fund that I care most about is the Fund for Recreation.

This fund arose, they say, when Shanghai was in its splendor. What a fund we all had of money, and each boxer found a bower! And the merchants, being casketship with successful speculation, were in the right to be in some legitimate recreation.

Then first that took a money bag and filled it full of cash, and turned it to a treasure, that none might it murmur!

And the treasure, were a solemn oath, "as I'll eat salt and ward and guardfully guard the Fund for Recreation."

Then years rolled on, and each man sought another to add to his stock, and some remained behind.

In recreations and in cricketing soars found a relaxation, but not a word was said or heard of the Fund for Recreation.

Then up and spoke a British hold, I census tell

Said he, "To waste no noble fund, I hold it is a shame."

He ponder well and let each man with due premises a scheme how to apply the Fund for Recrecation.

Some said to build a theatre and some fees a deal of cash,

And some proposed with pride the paddy fields to people.

And some to buy the Louvre, and some for a railway station.

While others wished to mend the roads with the Fund for Recreations.

And when the schemes were published, they all said, "What a fund you did swear to give!"

For one man thought his plan deserved the first consideration.

And in his neighbour's only found a Fund for Recreation.

So that when called a meeting and appointed

Committees.

They then sat and strained the oilings, with faces alike and merry.

But nothing did they find there, except a butt of sherry!

And the treasures underwent a wonderful alteration.

When the treasures said, "you bear the Fund for Recreations."

They then went to the treasurer, and unto him did say,

"The fund which you did swear to give!"

And the treasurer said, with gracious smile, and without hesitation,

"In the cellar of the Club you'll find the Fund for Recreations."

They then sat and strained the oilings, with faces alike and merry.

But nothing did they find there, except a butt of sherry!
